This oddly shaped chaptau of mauve fine straw, which has an exceedingly wide brim slightly curved at the back and extending several inches beyond the coiffure, is sharply rolled up and at the front, doubled forward and bent into curves filled with pale pink satin ribbon lops and clusters of flowers. . The crown, rather narrow and pointed in front, sloping sharply toward the back, is covered with a mass of trailing arbutus and orchids. The frock of finely tucked batiste is trimmed with Cluny insertions and muslin bands, Greek key embroidered in mauve and pink shades.
